

Dear Aunt Augusta: The Aftermath of World War II

~ Letters Provided By Kathy Yonker

World War Two ended with Germany's surrender on May 7, 1945. V-E day was declared on May 8, 1945. On that day, British Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery described Germany as follows:

Displaced persons were roaming about the country, often looting as they went. Transportation and communications services had ceased to function. Agriculture and industry were largely at a standstill. Food was scarce and there was a serious risk of famine and disease during the coming months. And to crown it all there was no central government in between, and the machinery whereby a central government could function no longer existed.

ASHHS member Kathy Lu Yonker's great grandmother Augusta nee Thede (Jan 7, 1882 – Jan 6, 1964) received several letters from family members living in Schleswig-Holstein in the horrid aftermath of World War Two.

ASHHS thanks Kathy for providing these letters and allowing us to read and understand the difficult life in the aftermath of World War Two.

They are presented here with minimal edits of the translation.

Aunt Augusta nee Thede

Dear Aunt Augusta

Last week I was visiting with (someone) and there I read your loving letter. It made us feel very happy/pleased that you dearest ones are thinking of us.

That encourages me to write this letter. I am the eldest daughter of F.L, my dad was the eldest (something) of Uncle H. Dad is 75 years old my parents live by (somewhere) close by, anyway my one and only brother Hubert is an engineer. I live with my husband and our daughter in a city close to (where the parents live). Our daughter is 18 years old, my brother has two children 8 and 6 years old. My husband was injured also my brother was injured in the war, both came home again. We all wished there had been no war—but nothing we could have done. Lots of misery the war caused, we suffered tremendously, it is hard to believe how much War can inflict.

Crosses of Distinction

Crosses of Distinction is an original and ongoing historical fiction story about the Franco-Prussian War and the families it affected and how their lives will ultimately all collide throughout history.

- Kylie Schaffer is a Senior Airman in today's US Air Force currently serving with the 494th Fighter Squadron from RAF Lakenheath in England. Her third great grandfather served in and won the Iron Cross during the Franco-Prussian War for reasons unknown. She and her team is headed to an old Cold War base in Ukraine to recover a broken F-15E Strike Eagle.

– After witnessing his twin brother Hansi jump ship and return to Hamburg (where he joined a Prussian dragoon squad), Harimann is sailing towards England and eventually America.

- Theodore the son of Ailbe's neighbors Koenraad and Mili Schaffer was just conscripted into the Prussian Army.

– Tikva with her daughter Adamina travel with their Aunt Angelika towards Hamburg after fleeing Romania. Tikva and Adamina seek a better life in Germany with their aunt.

ASHHS Annual Endowment Fund Report

By Dean Rohweder

Yearend 2019 ASHHS Endowment Fund Report

The market value of the ASHHS Endowment Fund on December 31, 2019 was $84,221.66, an increase of $10,318.65 (14%) during the year.

No gifts were received during the year. The increase resulted from interest, dividends and stock appreciation that was partially offset by CF-GRB expenses and a distribution to ASHHS to cover three grants:

(1) In 2019 a grant of $275 that was approved in 2018 was made to fund additional pictures for the 48ers memorial at City Cemetery.

(2) A grant of $1,500 for seed money for the 2019 Low German Conference which was subsequently returned to the Endowment account when the conference was very successful.

(3) A grant in the amount $1,057.88 was made to purchase a new computer for use by the Genealogy group. Currently the Endowment Fund Committee has $2,521 available for grants in 2020.

The Community Foundation (which invests the fund) has not provided the guidelines for the 2020 distribution but it should be in the vicinity of $2,000 bringing the total funds available to around $4,500.

Dean Rohweder, Chairman ASHHS Endowment Fund Committee

Friendship Conference: A Short History of Bredstedt September 11-13, 2020 in Bredstedt, Schleswig-Holstein, Germany

By Hans-Werner Hamann

Mayor Christian Schmidt greatly looks forward to welcoming many guests from the USA and ASHHS as they attend our 2020 conference in Bredstedt. On behalf of that welcome, I would like to share some information about Bredstedt in preparation for your visit.

The first mention of Bredstedt can be traced back to 1231 where it was recorded as Bredhaestath within the Earth Book census. King Valdemar II (also spelled Waldemar) commissioned a census to track royal income and properties under the Kingdom of Denmark. The census (or Earth Book) contains a collection of manuscripts that recorded for the first time many locations throughout Denmark, northern Germany, and other locations. Historians consider it the most important record of locations and culture during the Middle Ages. Those original manuscripts currently reside in the Danish National Archives in Copenhagen.

Originally Bredstedt resided just off the coast of the North Sea. But it was close enough to have its own small port. However, the North Sea receded after the building of a dike so that, today, Bredstedt resides five Kilometers from the coast.

In 1477, Bredstedt was raised to the status of "preurban law," or "Flecken" in German. King Frederic granted Bredstedt permission to hold a free market twice a year. Eventually that grew into a weekly market day, which was carried out from 1633 by the permission of King Christian IV.

Trade enabled Bredstedt to grow much larger, but not without some setbacks. Fire destroyed thirtyfive houses along Norderstrasse from April 9 – 10, 1699. Major fire then revisited Bredstedt burning twenty houses on September 22, 1737. Then again, flames destroyed almost one hundred houses along Osterstrasses on the night of March 26 – 27, 1858. The city also experienced war damage as bombs destroyed several houses at the end of World War II.

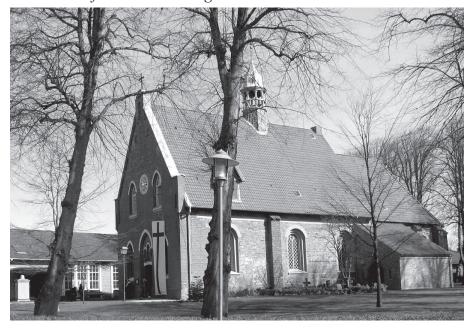

Bredstedt has a wonderful market square which is dominated by the construction of the Apotheke or pharmacy. The Apotheke house was built in 1611 for the Hardesvogt. (A Hardesvogt was a speaker and administrator for several jurisdictions.) The façade was often changed over time, but its basic features were retained. A chapel was built in 1462. It became a full church called St. Nikolai Church in 1510. Its impressive architecture is late Gothic brick built with field stones.

From 1867 to 1975, Bredstedt was the seat of the district court in the successor of the Harde. In 1887 the station on the Marschbahn from Hamburg to the island of Sylt was built. On October 8, 1900 Bredstedt was granted city rights.

Bredstedt was independent until April 1, 2008. Now Bredstedt has joined with the municipalities of Amt Bredstedt-Land and Amt Stollberg to create the Amt Middle North Friesland with its administrative seat in Bredstedt.

Friendship Conference: A Short History of Bredstedt September 11-13, 2020 in Bredstedt, Schleswig-Holstein, Germany

The Frisian culture is colorful and fascinating echoing the landscape and history of North Frisia and Bredstedt is right in the middle. Trade in whaling and seal hunting, storm surges, land reclamation, and emigration to America—these are just a few headlines on exciting sections of the history of North Friesland.

In addition to the West Frisians in the Netherlands and the East Frisians in the north of Lower Saxony, there remain other areas where Frisians can traditionally be found: these are the North Frisians on the North Sea coast of Schleswig-Holstein (west of the district of North Frisia) as well as Bredstedt has two Evangelical Lutheran parishes. The parish of Saint Nikolai is the largest with approximately 3,800 parishioners. The evangelical Danish parish uses a church room in the Danish school in Bredstedt. The Catholic Marienkapelle, in which a service is held every Saturday at Clementstrasse belongs to the Catholic parish in Husum. islands and Halligen.

More information at www.nordfriiskinstituut.de Today Bredstedt is a beautiful small town in North Frisia, north of Husum and has approximately 5,500 inhabitants inside an area of 9.75 square kilometers. Please visit our city's website at www.bredstedt.de

Do You Plan on Attending the Friendship Conference in September?

If you plan on attending the Friendship Conference in Germany, please let us know. We are working on the possibility of attaining a group travel rate. And if you are interested and have the time to a longer trip, we are arranging some excursions outside the dates of the conference.

Please contact ASHHS at our email address: ashhswalcott@gmail.com.

More details of the conference and trip will hopefully be provided next issue due around the beginning of May.

Quad City Ukulele Club Entertains ASHHS

ASHHS met at the Walcott American Legion for our quarterly meeting on February 16, 2020.

Business was light. Mike Kearney introduced himself for the first time as president of ASHHS, and Dean Rohweder gave his annual Endowment Fund report (page 4).

Discussion of the 2020 Friendship Conference in Schleswig-Holstein occupied some time after the meeting. We discussed additional sightseeing tours and group travel (page 6).

We were all greatly entertained by the Quad City Ukulele Club. Even one couple danced during their final song. Way to go Lee and Mary Ann.

The Club entertained with music and song and even a wonderful kazoo feature. From songs such as "Roll Out The Barrel" to "Johnny Be Good," the club's nonstop, fun and flighty (in the best way), entertainment was a joy to behold.

That is correct: Runes are not dead. Before the Anglo-Saxons settled Britain (as certain scholars believe), they used what is now called the futhorc. Futhorc is the name of the collection of ancient runes that most likely originated in North Frisia; it is called the Anglo-Saxon or Anglo-Frisia runes. Its name "futhorc" comes from the sound values of its first six runes, much like how we call our keyboard layout "QWERTY." The first six runes in figure 1 spell out futhorc. Note: Some rune symbols vary in definition.

But while editing "A Short History of Bredstedt," I discovered something quite interesting about this runic language of our historic ancestors. It is not dead.

Early computer games, most notably the Ultima series of role-playing games, used this exact runic language as the language within the game. Onwards from Ultima, computer games have incorporated these runic characters and have even created their own rune systems of both language and play.

The game Ultima IV was a seminal game in the entire history of computer games. It remains one of the most admired and beloved games for its central usage of morality and story. At that time, games could be easily pirated by transferring the disc from one user to another. To reduce pirating, most games of that era included items called "feelies." These items contain information vital to not only playing the game but also winning it. One of the feelies from Ultima IV was a cloth map of the world (figure 2). You can see its use of Anglo-Frisia runes.

Why use runic characters? I believe they add a sense of mystery, antiquity, and authenticity to the created playable world. Often in older games they helped the player play with both sight and imagination to surrealistically visualize a world beyond what primitive computer graphics could offer.

Some may claim cultural appropriation. I call it a celebration. So, let's celebrate that our history lives. Let's celebrate that our culture had bred itself into new cultures that continues to engage with new generations and evolve into tomorrow.

Another evolution of runes comes from Probstei, Schleswig-Holstein. ASHHS Endowment Fund Manager Dean Rohweder provided me some newspaper clippings that recorded the symbols used by hobos in Probstei to mark their belongings.

Dean's distant relative Klaus Lage told him that by these symbols, tools and equipment are recognizable and distinguishable by indication and mark. They were also used as house marks.

Throughout history, hobos have used symbols to identify directions, information, and dangers.

Chapter Six "Forging Arms" ~ 17 May 1870, 1400 hours, Hamburg, Germany

Regiment Commander Erich looked over his men. He thought back to his battles in the war against Austria, the brothers he lost, and the hegemony he helped attain for Bismarck. Dwelling upon the loss of blood to build borders always caused his left arm to throb where it once was ripped by a bullet. He gently rubbed the scar. He knew the suffering the men would ultimately face. Some will die. They knew it too. He saw it in their eyes. They looked so young. But now wasn't that time. Now is the time to build weapons from men, to turn blood into a burning passion for war. Erich put these thoughts aside, remembered his orders, and addressed the men.

"Men. I was there. I fought through that Austrian mud tainted with Prussian blood. We were outnumbered. We knew Frederick and his army would soon arrive, but we were pinned, and we were scared. It is okay to be scared. For courage is grown from not only fear but also love. Love for your brothers and captains, love of Prussia and the burgeoning fatherland. But most importantly love towards our Chancellor, the indomitable Otto von Bismarck. Today you will learn the Zündnadelgewehr, this marvel of Prussian engineering. Four years ago, it saved my life and the lives of thousands against Austria.

We fought the Battle of Königgrätz. Austrian artillery impeded our advance. but the vastly larger Austrian army had one fatal flaw. Their soldiers were armed with the slow Lorenz rifle. Yet our Zündnadelgewehr can fire up to ten times faster, and while they had to stand to reload, we could reload while staying prone. Then we just picked them off. We won the day and the war. The Zündnadelgewehr saved my life. It will save yours. It will save the fatherland. We will teach you this." Erich turned to the man on his left. "Korporal."

The korporal snapped to attention and ordered the squad the same.

Theodor stood straight holding his needle gun by his side. He held his head high and looked directly at Erich. Then he joined his voice to the single voice of his brothers-in-arms. "Der Soldat soll das Vaterland gegen äussere Feinde verteidigen, und die Ordnung im Innern beschützen¹."

Theodor walked with his squad to the firing range. He felt a push and then stumbled forward. He turned around and glared at Thomas. "Hey, don't push."

"Theodor, look. Up there," said Thomas.

Theodor glanced up the slope and spotted a tall officer with captain accoutrements. Most noticeable was his bright blue uniform with a glaring yellow collar and matching cuffs. "What the hell, why is a Bavarian captain here?"

"I guess we'll soon find out. He is watching us quite carefully."

"Well, we better shoot well. Good shooting brother." "Good shooting."

Erich stood next to the Bavarian officer. "Thoughts, Captain?"

The Captain stood stoic. He watched Theodor's squad fire their guns making fine hits against the targets. He watched other squads practicing combat drills. They dove and rolled across the mud to find protection behind rocks and trees. Others practiced thrusting and slicing their bayonets into straw dummies that swung on ropes. He also saw other squads sitting in tents learning the educational arts of war². Of this, his chest swelled proud. Throwing dumb soldiers at an army doesn't win wars. He knew that only soldiers who fought with tactics and strategy, those who outthought their enemies could win wars.

"You are doing well Commander", said the Captain

Theodor and his squad finished their firing practice. Erich led them up the slope to meet the Captain.

"Men, my name is Captain Celsus Girl³. Your military prowess—"

Theodor couldn't help himself and snorted out "Mädchen."

1 Recruits were indoctrinated with this. Translated: "The soldier must defend the fatherland against external enemies and also uphold domestic order." 2 "Once conscripted, Prussians took more target practice than their peers in other armies, and practiced small-unit fighting in camp and in tutorials, where veterans described the pace and confusion of combat to green recruits" (Wawro).

3 Captain Celsus Girl was an actual historical figure. He was attached to the Prussian Army and "marvelled at the education of his Prussian colleagues" (Wawro).

The other squad members laughed, and Captain Girl rushed into the squad, grabbed Theodor by uniform and threw him down and kicked him in the stomach. "Do you think I'm a girl, boy! So, you know the English meaning of my name; you are educated. But can you use it to fight. You don't respect me. I doubt you respect your men?" He watched as Theodor stood up clutching his stomach.

Captain Girl walked around Theodor looking at the squad as he spoke. "Men, does this dog think he is better than you?" Then he stared directly at Theodor, "Boy, do you think you're better than your squad mates? Show me how you will lead these men."

Theodor spit some blood from his mouth and drew himself straight into attention. He looked at Captain Girl and spoke with pride and confidence. His squad immediately followed his lead. "Der Soldat soll das Vaterland gegen äussere Feinde verteidigen, und die Ordnung im Innern beschützen."

Captain Girl walked back to Erich, and with his back to the squad he whispered in Erich's ear, "very good Captain," and again with a slight smile looking over the entire camp, "yes, very good."

That evening after a long day of training, Theodore and his squad were in a tent eating a late and quiet dinner. The sun had gone down, and the tent was shrouded in darkness. Mud caked their uniforms. Owls hooted from the forest, and a couple of fireflies flew inside the tent. Theodor thought it was a little early for light-y bugs, but it was a hot and humid spring. Yet it was an eerie light. Theodor kept quiet, thankful his food stayed down after that kick to his gut.

Thomas spoke and asked, "Hey Theodor, why didn't you fight him? Do you think he wanted you to fight him?"

"No, I don't. He talked of respect and education. Respect earned from fighting is nothing compared to respect from leadership. But I'm no leader. Besides, he would have beaten me. I just want to live and return home." He belched and thought to himself, hopefully without any more gut kicks. "Please just leave me alone right now."

"Theodor, we will follow you. You led us today by outthinking Captain Girl," said Thomas The other squad members grunted in agreement.

"But you have to do us one favor, Theodor."

"Yeah, what's that."

"Don't ever make fun of anybody's name again." Theodore couldn't help it. He laughed and responded, "next time kick me first."

His men laughed.

~ 18 May 1870, 0500, Southeast Coast of England

Harimann couldn't sleep. Each of the 400 miles between Hamburg and Dover, England burned in agony without his twin Hansi. Finally, and tired of tossing and turning, he walked onto the deck and saw the White Cliffs of Dover. He had heard about them and seen drawings in books, but to see them in person took his breath away. The sun embedded within a burning lattice of deep red clouds rose behind him. The east facing cliffs absorbed that flaming visage. It turned them into an otherworldly barrier of fire against the end of the world. Oddly, this fortified his own courage, for its massive bulwark acted like an imposing outstretched hand that commanded, halt. He suddenly remembered scripture: So he drove out the man; and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden Cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life.

He knew now what he must do. He must go back. Like Adam and Eve, he will disobey his father's command. He will not live in peace but fight in war. But how. He knew the ship would dock for supplies in Dover. He looked at the port. There were few ships. Most were fishing or coastal vessels. But there was a schooner. He looked closely at it. His heart sank when he saw it flying the blue, white, and red French flag. But his courage was not lost. The ship was positioned for an eastward sail, and the winds blew favorably towards France. This is what he would do. Then another scripture popped into his head. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil.

Harimann looked toward the east, towards France. The sun broke through the clouds and shone brightly in his eyes. He spoke to himself. "I will fight. I will return home."

Our house was not damaged and a lot of people have nothing some due to the Russians taking the country away. We are all hungry, a lot around us are starving. Especially we do so miss eating FAT! The last eight years has affected our health so we feel very weak, meaning it will be hard for us over the coming winter months, especially as the last two years winter was very severe. Then we needed more firewood and food. So not looking forward to winter as it is expected to be awful.

Makes us feel better to know you are thinking about us in Germany. (someone) will have the courage to write to you. With the ration card we obtained 150 gram (5 oz) of butter which should last for four weeks, otherwise no other Fat to be obtained. Two cups full of skimmed milk for one week, also two slices of bread which we made out of porridge about two pounds to cover four weeks. You can not imagine what our City looks like, we cook in rainwater because the plumbing system does not work.

We feel very bad (embarrassed) to ask for help from you. Have much worry about the parents, my old small (little) Dad weighs about one hundred pounds, at this time of life one would expect a quite comfortable life and Dad had a pension so without a War they would have had a good life.

You have to stand in line for ages to obtain anything. Our little daughter was 10 at the start of the War now eight years later and she is 18 ... what a life?

Dear loving Aunt Augusta, if you have any shoes or clothes from your children for us, we have a brilliant friend who can sew and remodel anything.

Dear Aunty hopefully you understand and will not hold it against us for begging in this way. We will enjoy a lovely letter to hear how you and your children are doing. How are your sons and daughter. In our family book are photos of the children that have been sent from America.

I am now 44 years old, Is not your daughter the same age?

Dear Aunt Augusta: The Aftermath of World War II

Dear Aunt Augusta,

I just wrote a few letters § thought I should write you as well. You may be surprised that the bank asked me to write you. Your inheritance from father is still open; he died in 1918. It was 7,600 Deutschmarks but due to inflation there is only a balance of 600. The banker does not know what to do, perhaps you want to write to the bank. It really hurts us that Hermann stopped writing us. We did not want this war, I would rather have kept my husband with me those 5 years and now we have to give up our 3 boys. In the Fall we heard that her husband died towards the end of the war. She has 5 kids, the son is 11, then comes 4 girls the youngest age is 4. She got nothing when Willie died because he wasn't for Hitler so there was no assistance of any kinds.

We receive mail from Grete's husband, he is a prisoner in France. Grete has no children. We haven't heard from our Hans in over 3 years. Don't know if he's still alive. He's in Russia where there is much starvation. You can imagine what heartaches we must endure. I've been bedridden since Christmas with terrible cold and add our situation which makes one not want to live any longer. You were sick last year too; Hermann was not that old either § then your son ... you've been through much too but hopefully you can enjoy your children § grandchildren. Yes we are all getting old. We worked so hard and saved so we could enjoy our old age but things keep getting worse § worse.

We have such a large house which is now full of refugees. We only occupy kitchen, one bedroom & living room for ourselves. We have 10 refugees from East Prussia. Otherwise we are ok. We have more than enough money. We're having a strenuous winter & most people do not have food to eat nor anything to burn to keep warm. The war has brought such misery around the world all because of crazy Hitler. But no one can inquire about anything we would disappear immediately.

I will close with best wishes for you all. Heartfelt greetings from Thies $\boldsymbol{\xi}$ Adele.

Dear Aunt Augusta: The Aftermath of World War II

Dear Síster-ín-law Augusta,

Adele sent me the letter she received from you.

We were all happy to hear about you after such a long time & I'm sure you were glad to hear from your brother Hermann. I want to write you a few lines.

Healthwise we are doing well. From our 5 children, 4 sons § 1 daughter, the youngest did not return home from a flight, the disaster happened in 1942. The rest of the boys are home, 2 with their families. Our daughter § second oldest son are not married § living at home with us. Hans lost his left eye in the end. We're glad that the Russians didn't capture him or we would still be waiting for him.

Our city was bombed & destroyed. Many refugees landed here from the east which makes things quite crowded. In the large cities needs are much greater. Many people must freeze in the winter. Life is best for farmers.

From sister Adele we received care packages. We had practically no clothing and shelter but we did receive letters § a few packages which made us very happy. Our daughter writes in English with Loise Anne so she can translate well for us.

I heard from Zena that you had a stroke. I wish that you are well now, it is good you are with your children for support.

S. 4. 6

Heartfelt greetings from you Sister-in-Law & Brother-in-Law Teresa, John & Kids.
